

Inspirit Energy Holdings plc
("Inspirit" or the "Company")

Appointment of David Lenigas as Non-Executive Chairman

Inspirit Energy (AIM: INSP), the efficient energy technology company, is pleased to announce that David Lenigas has today been appointed as non-Executive Chairman of the Company with John Gunn, currently Executive Chairman, assuming the role of Executive Director and Chief Executive Officer.

David Lenigas, the new Chairman of Inspirit commented:

“Inspirit’s new super efficient combined boiler and micro power station products represent an exciting technology that is now ready to move to real life trials and sales in commercial and residential premises. There is nothing on the market like it today that can match its unique ability to simultaneously generate 15 kilowatts of heat and 3 kilowatts of electricity at an overall efficiency of 92%. It is this feature, compared to the average 37% of grid generated supply that makes the Inspirit boiler so good for the consumer and the environment.”

The global expansion opportunities for the Inspirit micro combined heat and power (mCHP) boiler, as it is known, are very substantial. Every Inspirit mCHP boiler will be a micro power station in its own right and with the electricity generation coming from waste boiler heat, will do its part in reducing greenhouse gasses and lessen Britain’s reliance on importing expensive electricity from foreign power suppliers.”

I am pleased to be working with the teams in London and Sheffield that are tasked with commercialising the Inspirit mCHP boiler and look forward to installing the first commercial units over the coming year. The Company expects that the Inspirit mCHP boiler will initially be marketed in the UK and Europe and eventually worldwide.”

John Gunn added: “I am delighted that David has decided to join Inspirit, to help us drive the business forward and grow it into a successful manufacturer of micro combined heat and power boilers. He has a wealth of experience in public markets and his skills will benefit the company immensely as we achieve our first commercial orders.”

David Lenigas has extensive experience operating in global public markets having served in a senior executive capacity on many public company boards. He is currently the Executive Chairman of Rare Earth Minerals Plc, Leni Gas and Oil Plc, AfriAg Plc, Solo Oil Plc and various other AIM listed companies. He has also served as Executive Chairman of London listed Lonrho plc for six years up to September 2012 and was responsible for Lonrho plc's expansion into over 20 countries in Africa in sectors covering agriculture, infrastructure, hotels, IT and aviation.

Notes to the Editors:

Inspirit Energy, is a company based in Sheffield and is currently developing a micro combined heat and power (mCHP) boiler for the commercial and residential markets. The boiler is specifically designed to meet the challenge of reduced carbon energy supply and is capable of running on natural gas, LPG and Bio Fuels. The appliance produces hot water (for tap water or central heating) and electrical output simultaneously. The installation can be of single or multiple configuration and its high operating efficiency together with the off-set of electricity costs provides a very attractive investment payback proposition.

Inspirit intends to explore opportunities to licence out the underlying technology and the Directors believe that in some instances, the patents owned by Inspirit may be also used in the development of products other than a mCHP appliance. A prototype of the appliance has been independently tested and shown to be capable of simultaneous generation of up to 15kW thermal and up to 3kW electrical output. Once development of the appliance has been completed and commercialised, the Directors expect that the appliance will initially be marketed in the UK and Europe and eventually worldwide. Additional revenue streams may be possible through product licensing, sales of warranties and further development of the product.
